About Tafsir Fi Zialil Quran Fi Zilal al-Qur'an (Arabic: في ظلال القرآن, romanized: fī ẓilāl al-qurʾān, l the Shade of the Qur'an') is a highly influential commentary of the Qur'an, written during 1951-1965 by the Egyptian Sayyid Qutb (1906-1966), a leader within the Muslim Brotherhood. He wrote (or re-wrote) most of the original 30 volumes (114 Surahs) while in prison following an attempted assassination of Egyptian dictator Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1954.[1] The book outlines Qutb's vision of a Muslim state and society. It is considered by some[who?] to be a comprehensive and far-reaching commentary that takes a clear and lucid interpretation of the Qur'an. It has much influence throughout the Muslim world, especially amongst the ordinary lay practitioners of Islam in the Arab world.[citation needed] About Author Sayyid Ibrahim Husayn Shadhili Qutb[Note 1] (/ˈkuːtəb/[2] or /ˈkʌtəb/; Egyptian Arabic pronunciation: ['sæjjɪd ˈʔɔtˤb], Arabic: ['sæjjɪd ˈqʊtˤb]; Arabic: سيد قطب إبراهيم حسين Sayyid Quṭb; 9 October 1906 – 29 August 1966), known popularly as Sayyid Qutb, was an Egyptian author, educator, Islamic theorist, poet, and a leading member of the Egyptian Muslim Brotherl 1950s and 1960s. In 1966, he was convicted of plotting the assassination of Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser and was executed by hanging. Author of 24 books,[3] with around 30 books unpublished for different reasons (mainly destruction by the state),[4] and at least 581 articles,[5] including novels, literary arts critique and works on education, he is best known in the Muslim world for his work on what he believed to be the social and political role of Islam, particularly in his books Social Justice and Ma'alim fi al-Tariq (Milestones). His magnum opus, Fi Zilal al-Quran (In the Shade of the Qur'an), is a 30-volume commentary on the Quran.[6] Sayyid Qutb Language: English | Format: PDF | Volumes: 15 | Size: 20 MB Ever since its revelation 1400 years ago, the Qur’an has been a book of guidance and inspiration, a reference point, and a rich source of social and moral dynamism for hundreds of millions of people throughout the world who believe it to be immutable word of God. Hardly a generation passes without a fresh attempt to unravel the meanings of the Qur’an and gain deeper insight into its universal message within a contemporary perspective. In The Shade Of The Qur’an is more than ‘just another’ commentary; yet it is not too over-reaching or outlandish to be a completely new interpretation. It is an earnest, sincere and sober look at man’s contemporary achievements and difficulties in the light of the message of the Qur’an. It is an effort to vigorously explore its rich wisdom, and expand its invaluable guidance for the benefit of an increasingly ‘sophisticated’ , yet highly perplexed modern society. The work, which is by far Sayyid Qutb’s largest and most profound, spans the whole of the text of the Qur’an. It was written, and partly re-written, over a period of more than 15 years, most of which the author had spent in Egyptian prisons, during the 1950s and 1960s. In it is embedded Sayyid Qutb’s insight, highly esteemed intellectual vigor, and his widely-acclaimed literary prowess. In The Shade Of The Qur’an has been universally recognized as an outstanding contribution to Islamic thought and scholarship, to which students and scholars, as well as contemporary Islamic revivalist movements all over the world, owe a great deal. Now that it is available in English, it will continue to enlighten and inspire millions more. It will take its rightful place as an indispensable work of reference for a proper understanding of contemporary Islamic thinking. The Author : Syed Qutb, true to his teachings died for the values he espoused. He was sentenced to death and hanged by a military court established by Nasser. Writing was his jihad against the jahiliyya that he saw all around him 1906 : Born in the village Musha, northern Egypt. 1930’s and 1940’s: Qutb start working as a inspector of schools for the Egyptian Ministry of Education. He also tries to start a career as a writer, and publishes some books but without much success. 1948: Travels to USA on a scholarship to study the educational system, receiving a master’s degree from the Colorado State College of Education. 1951: Qutb returns to Egypt, and joins the Muslim Brotherhood (Ikhwan ul Muslim) 1952: First volume of his commentary In the Shade of the Qur’an (Fi Zilal al-Qur’an) is published. There would be 29 more volumes to this work. 1954: He is arrested and sentenced to long imprisonment together with many other members of the Ikhwan. 1964: After 10 years in prison, Qutb is released. 1965: Is allegedly part of the planning of the assassination of President Gamal Abdu l-Nasser, and is arrested again. 1966 August 29: Executed after being found guilty in the 1965 plot. May Allah Bless his Soul In This Article The poet, Maya Angelou, wrote in one of my favorite poems, “Nobody, but nobody/Can Make it out here alone.” While reflecting over my life, I have found this to be true consistently, especially while growing up as a child in the ghetto. A place where limiting beliefs can stunt your growth.Today I will discuss how having an amazing support system helped me overcome those limiting beliefs. In addition, I will discuss how the principles of financial independence can be used to improve the lives of those that remain in this environment. Since I was able to escape, I think it is only right that I reach back to help those at the bottom.For most people living in the ghetto, the idea of financial independence seems impossible. The primary goal is to escape and never look back.From Kindergarten to 8th grade, I lived in this environment with my mom and siblings. Although my parents got divorced in 1992, my father has always been in my life. He was around as often as possible.To make a long story short, my mom would end up purchasing a home with my dad’s help in a better neighborhood. You can read that story on my blog. Here, I want to focus more on the limiting beliefs I and many others encountered while growing up in a low-income urban community.Limiting Beliefs of the GhettoCommon limiting beliefs one may encounter when living in the ghetto are:The only way out of the ghetto is to become an athlete or rapperBecause of my inferior living conditions, I am inferior to othersMy worth comes from owning name brand clothingHoop & Rap Dreams ShatteredWhile it is entirely possible for you to become a professional athlete or rap star, it is highly unlikely. Limiting yourself to these two career paths can limit your earning potentialWhen I was younger, I remember foolishly thinking I should focus exclusively on basketball or rapping to escape the ghetto.As a gullible teenager, I downloaded hypnosis audio tracks that promised to make me grow taller. I would go to the basketball court in my neighborhood to practice for hours, instead of doing my homework.My hoop dreams deflated after I wasn’t selected to play on my middle school’s basketball team.After that, I decided that I would focus on becoming a “gangsta” rapper. I began writing violent rhymes in my composition notebook. The problem with this career choice was that I was far from a gangster. When my father found these rhymes, he destroyed them.Myth of InferiorityWhile growing up in the ghetto, I had to realize that my substandard living environment did not make me inferior as a person.For example, I would sometimes become frustrated while riding my bike through wealthier neighborhoods. I would wonder if my life mattered less than those who were in the bigger houses.I’d wonder why my neighborhood did not have pretty landscaping and huge oak trees.Despite not having those things in my environment, my parents and teachers would always remind me that I was somebody. They challenged me to grow.My Worth Comes From Owning Name Brand ClothingWe live in a consumer-driven society so it should come as no surprise that people in the ghetto spend money on name brand items to make themselves happy. To me, there is nothing wrong with this. However, it becomes a problem when material things are prioritized above more important responsibilities like taking care of children.Fortunately, I had a frugal father who would often challenge my consumerist mindset. I remember coming home one day from school wearing a Tommy Hilfiger shirt, feeling like I was the coolest kid on the block. My dad must have sensed this because he asked, “Why does having someone else’s name on your shirt make you feel good about yourself?”I cannot recall what I replied back to him. He was one of those fathers who would tell you stories of how he grew up wearing his shoes until they fell apart. Instead of listening, I would let his words go in one ear and out the other. Or get on the computer, which would take me to another world. A world beyond the ghetto.A Digital WorldWhile growing up in the ghetto was far from ideal, having parents and teachers who cared about me helped me a lot. Most of my time during my middle school years were spent at home in the digital world.A world where I could build basketball websites using Geocities (does that still exist?). In this world, I could reach out to people from diverse backgrounds. I loved the internet then and I love it now because it allowed me to connect with so many like-minded individuals.Financial Independence CommunityMost recently, the internet has allowed me to connect with some awesome people in the financial independence community. I learned of this group’s existence over two years ago through a personal finance curation site called Rockstar Finance.After about a year of reading the content featured on Rockstar Finance, I decided to create my own blog.The top three things I love about the financial independence community are:Knowledge is shared freelyPeople are extremely supportiveLimiting beliefs are constantly challengedIf you compare this online environment with the ghetto I grew up in, it’s easy to see which one is more conducive to success.While passing through the ghetto recently, I started to wonder whether some FI principles could be used to improve low-income communities. I’m aware that this would be a difficult task, but it is not impossible, right?The degree of difficulty will depend on the individual’s unique financial circumstances.I also know that financial literacy alone will not be the answer to every community problem. Since this is a personal finance site, I will stick to posting financial solutions. We will focus solely on things we can control. With that being said, let’s begin our discussion!How FI Principles Can Be Used to Improve Low-Income Communities“Education is the great weapon against exploitation” -Andrew Hallam.Every time I drive through the ghetto, looking at the payday loan stores on every corner infuriates me. I think to myself, “How can the poor among us become richer when they have compound interest as a headwind? In my mind, these stores represent a soulless capitalism that exploits the poor and most vulnerable among us.“Then I recall a powerful quote I came across while reading The Millionaire Teacher. Andrew Hallam writes, “Education is the great weapon against exploitation.”I agree, but not just any education. Financial education is something lower-income communities desperately need. While I understand this won’t fix all of the communities problems, it can fix some of them. But how you might be wondering? By shattering all of those limiting beliefs of the ghetto we discussed earlier.Those limiting beliefs of the ghetto are replaced with:There are multiple paths to financial freedomI am not inferior to anyoneI am more than my clothesMultiple PathsThe first limiting belief we discussed was this idea that the only way out of the hood is to become a professional athlete or rapper. In the FI community, we know this is an alternative fact.In this digital age, there are countless ways to make money online. If that’s not your thing, you could learn how to create a business in your own community.That’s exactly what I have seen someone do recently in a lower income community ten minutes from my house. Mr. Horatio created a coffee shop where financial workshops are hosted. Members of the community meet there to talk business!A couple of visits ago, I overheard a financial advisor explaining to his client how the S&P 500 works!You Are Not InferiorRegardless of your skin color, net worth, or place of birth, you are not inferior to anyone. In my experience, the FI community has welcomed members from a diverse background with open arms.A perfect example of this would be Jamila, creator of Journey to Launch, regularly featuring guests from diverse backgrounds on her podcast.I may be a little biased, but I think it is safe to say that the FI community as a whole has a progressive mindset.You Are More Than Your ClothesAs a general rule, most people in the FI community wear the same outfit all year long. After calculating the opportunity cost of a $20 outfit, they choose to invest that money instead!All jokes aside, fashion does not seem to be very important for most people in the community. The term “stealth wealth” is frequently discussed. You might not be able to tell a person is wealthy by looking at them. Their wealth is hidden away in HSA accounts, Roths, the stock market, etc.While there is nothing wrong with purchasing quality clothing, tying your worth to name brand clothing is a recipe for financial disaster. You will never be able to purchase enough clothing to fill that emptiness inside.I know marketing campaigns have done a good job of convincing all of us that name brand clothes are a necessity. I have learned from Seth Godin that all marketers are liars. Don’t trust them.People in lower-income communities are better off investing in the most important brand in town, themselves.ClosingIn reading this, I hope you have realized how having a support network (digital or in real life) can help you along your journey. I am blessed to have an amazing support system both online and in real life. Because of that, I am always thinking of ways to help others, especially those at the bottom.If you are in a similar situation, I encourage you to pay it forward by helping other people succeed. It doesn’t even have to be by giving them money. A word of encouragement can go a long way!When we work together, regardless of our backgrounds, we can accomplish amazing things. I wish you the best of luck on your financial journey. Hopefully, you find the peace of mind you are searching for!“There are some millionairesWith money, they can’t useTheir wives run round like bansheesTheir children sing the bluesThey’ve got expensive doctorsTo cure their hearts of stone.But nobodyNo, nobodyCan make it out here alone.”-Maya Angelou
